CAA

Why work with the CAA?

The CAA builds links between commercial practice, academic research, and local communities, encouraging research and innovation in professional archaeological practice. We help with the management and interpretation of historic sites and landscapes – with a focus on training and capacity-building projects.

Our Expertise

The CAA is a research centre within University College London, where we benefit from being at the forefront of research, teaching and practice in conservation, cultural heritage policy, cultural resource management, public archaeology, and educational outreach.

We also have a professional contracts division with over forty staff: Archaeology South-East. ASE offers specialist skills in archaeological project management, survey, excavation, materials analysis, historic buildings research and recording, and environmental impact assessment.

Clients

Clients of our Site Management Services include UNESCO, the World Monuments Fund, English Heritage, the Archaeological Survey of India, the Ministry of Culture of Turkmenistan, Patrimoine Culturelle of Mali, and the International Centre for Chinese Heritage and Archaeology.

Site Management and Interpretation Services

- Condition assessment and site remediation
- Integrated site conservation and management plans
- Public consultation
- World Heritage site nomination files, site management consultancy and planning

- Evaluation and revision of existing management plans
- Development of teaching materials tailored to individual sites
- Site interpretation
- Education resources and outreach
- Information packs for stakeholders
- Project design and funding application support

Training and Facilitation

We can arrange for training courses and facilitated workshops in all the above areas of work.

The CAA is committed to ethical and sustainable approaches, in which local communities take part in and benefit from the historic and archaeological interest of the places they live in.
